

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

A.J. OLIVER,

Plaintiff,

vs.

GMRI, INC., dba RED LOBSTER #0521,

Defendant.

CASE NO. 07cv1719-IEG(WMc)

Order Granting Defendant GMRI's
Motion to Decline Supplemental Jurisdiction and to Dismiss State Law
Claims [Doc. Nos. 4 and 5]

Presently before the Court is Defendant GMRI, Inc.'s motion to decline supplemental jurisdiction and dismiss Plaintiff's state law claims. Plaintiff has filed an opposition and Defendant has filed a reply. This motion is appropriate for submission on the papers and without oral argument pursuant to Local Rule 7.1(d)(1), and the November 13, 2007 hearing was previously vacated. For the reasons set forth herein, Defendant's motion is GRANTED.

Background

Plaintiff A.J. Oliver suffered a stroke approximately 13 years ago which left him paralyzed, speech impaired, and unable to stand or walk. [Complaint, ¶ 8.] He is required to use a motorized wheelchair. [Id.]

Plaintiff's claims arise from his visit to the Red Lobster Restaurant ("Restaurant") in Chula Vista, California. Plaintiff alleges Defendant denied him full and equal access to its Restaurant by failing to remove numerous barriers in violation of Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA") and Title 24 regulations. [Complaint, ¶ 10-14.] Plaintiff alleges Defendant has

1 intentionally maintained the subject property in its current non-compliant condition, and has 2 intentionally refrained from altering the subject property so that it complies with the accessibility
 3 standards. [Complaint, ¶ 14-15.]

4 Plaintiff states four claims for relief under Title III of the ADA, the California Disabled
 5 Persons Act (Cal. Civ. Code § 54 and 54.1), the California Unruh Civil Rights Act (Cal. Civ. Code
 6 § 51-52), and California Health & Safety Code § 19953 et seq. Plaintiff seeks injunctive relief, 7 declaratory relief, statutory damages, and attorneys fees.

8 Defendant moves to dismiss Plaintiff's state law claims. Defendant argues Plaintiff's claim 9 under the Unruh Act presents novel and complex issues of state law such that the Court should 10 decline to exercise its supplemental jurisdiction.

11 Discussion

12 "It is a fundamental precept that federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction." Owen
 13 Equipment & Erection Co. v. Kroger, 437 U.S. 365, 374 (1978). Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P.
 14 12(b)(1), a party may challenge the court's subject matter jurisdiction "on the basis that 15 supplemental jurisdiction . . . is improper" according to 28 U.S.C. § 1367. Sparrow v. Mazda
 16 American Credit, 385 F. Supp. 2d 1063, 1066 (E.D. Cal. 2005). A challenge to jurisdiction 17 pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1) can be either facial, confining the inquiry to allegations in the 18 complaint, or factual, permitting the court to look beyond the complaint. White v. Lee, 227 F.3d
 19 1214, 1242 (9th Cir.2000). Here, defendant is bringing a facial attack to jurisdiction and the court 20 confines its inquiry to the complaint. Once a party challenges subject matter jurisdiction, the 21 non-moving party bears the burden of establishing that jurisdiction exists. Kokkonen v. Guardian
 22 Life Ins. Co., 511 U.S. 375, 378 (1994).

23 Section 1367(a) of Title 28 grants supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims "that are 24 so related to claims in the action within such original jurisdiction that they form part of the same 25 case or controversy under Article III of the United States Constitution." 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a);
 26 United Mine Workers of America v. Gibbs, 383 U.S. 715, 725 (1966). To form part of the same 27 "case or controversy," the state law claims must "derive from a common nucleus of operative 28 fact[s] . . . such that [a plaintiff] would ordinarily be expected to try them all in one judicial proceeding.” United Mine Workers of America, 383 U.S. at 725. Here, the Court can exercise supplemental jurisdiction over plaintiff’s state law claims because those claims derive from the same “common nucleus of operative fact” as plaintiff’s federal ADA claim.

However, in certain circumstances a district court can decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction under §1367. Mendoza v. Zirkle Fruit Co., 301 F.3d 1163, 1174 (9th Cir. 2002). The district court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a state law claim if: 1) the claim raises a novel or complex issue of state law; 2) the state law claim substantially predominates over the federal claims; 3) the district court has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction; or 4) if there is some other exceptional and compelling reason to decline jurisdiction. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c); see, e.g., Sparrow, 385 F. Supp. 2d 1063 at 1070-71. In deciding whether to exercise supplemental jurisdiction, the court should consider the interest of judicial economy, convenience, fairness and comity. City of Chicago v. International College of Surgeons, 522 U.S. 156, 173 (1997); Smith v. Lenches, 263 F.3d 972, 977 (9th Cir. 2001). Defendant argues the Court should decline to exercise jurisdiction over Plaintiff’s state law claims in this case because those claims raise novel or complex issues. Defendant points to the recent dissension between the state and federal courts on the interpretation of California disability access statutes, and argues the state court is the appropriate venue to resolve such dispute.

Under Title III of the ADA, plaintiffs do not need to establish discriminatory intent to obtain injunctive relief. Lentini v. California Center for the Arts, 370 F.3d 837, 846-47 (9th Cir. 2004). Pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code §51(f), a violation of the ADA also qualifies as a violation of the Unruh Act. As a result, the Ninth Circuit has held that plaintiffs also do not need to prove discriminatory intent to obtain damages under the California Unruh Act. Id. at 847. California courts, however, have held that the Unruh Act does require proof of intentional discrimination before a plaintiff can recover damages. See Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV, 52 Cal. 3d 1142, 1175 (Cal. 1991); see generally Wilson, 493 F. Supp. 2d 1122 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (discussing the history of the Unruh Act and the interpretation of the California courts). In fact, the California Court of Appeal in Gunther v. Lin, 144 Cal. App. 4th 223, 252-257 (2006) expressly rejected the Ninth Circuit’s decision in Lentini and held that it improperly interpreted California law so as to

1 allow recovery of damages under Cal. Civ. Code § 52 without proof of intentional discrimination.

2 Other courts in this district have been faced with this conundrum. This court is obligated
3 to follow the Ninth Circuit's decision in Lentini, which allows plaintiffs to recover monetary
4 damages under the Unruh Act without proving discriminatory intent. Wilson v. Haria and Gogri
5 Corp., 479 F. Supp. 2d 1127, 1135-41 (finding Lentini controlling law and declining to follow
6 Gunther). However, Gunther plainly holds that a plaintiff seeking damages under Cal. Civ. Code
7 §52 must show intentional discrimination. Faced with this conflicting authority, courts of this 8 district have almost uniformly concluded that it is appropriate to decline supplemental jurisdiction.
9 See, e.g., Cross v. Pacific Coast Plaza Investments, L.P., 2007 WL 951772 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 6, 10 2007); Wilson v. PFS, LLC, 493 F. Supp. 2d 1122 (S.D. Cal. 2007); Morgan v. American Stores
11 Co., LLC, 2007 WL 191945 (S.D. Cal. Jun. 29, 2007); Pinnock v. Java Depot, Inc., 2007 WL
12 2462106 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 28, 2007); but see Pinnock v. Solana Beach Do It Yourself Dog Wash, 13 Inc., 2007 WL 1989635 (S.D. Cal. Jul. 3, 2007) (finding Gunther decision does not raise a novel or 14 complex issue of state law).

15 The court finds the reasoning of the majority of the judges of this Court to be persuasive.
16 It is for the state courts, not federal courts, to determine the proper interpretation of the Unruh Act
17 and its effect on plaintiff's state law claims. If this Court maintains jurisdiction over Plaintiff's 18 state law claims, the Court will be bound by Lentini to allow Plaintiff to recover damages under 19 the Unruh Act without any showing of intentional discrimination. However, if Plaintiff had filed
20 this case in the San Diego County Superior Court, that court would be bound by Gunther to deny
21 relief unless Plaintiff showed intent. Plaintiff's extensive discussion of Judge Lawrence Karlton's
22 decision in Wilson v. Haria and Gogri Corp., 479 F. Supp. 2d 1127, 1136 (E.D. Cal. 2007) does 23 not change the Court's opinion. Although Judge Karlton concluded the California Court of 24 Appeal wrongly decided Gunther, his decision only reinforces the fact that it is still unclear
25 whether Plaintiff must show intent to recover damages under the Unruh Act. As this Court first 26 noted in Organization for the Advancement of Minorities with Disabilities v. Brick Oven, 406 F.
27 Supp. 2d 1120, 1130 (S.D. Cal. 2005), "the remedial provision of the Unruh Act . . . present novel 28 and complex issues of unresolved state law." The California Court of Appeal's decision in

1 Gunther, finding that the Ninth Circuit in Lentini wrongly interpreted the Unruh Act, shows that 2 the comity interests have become more, not less compelling over time as the courts struggle to 3 resolve what remains an unreconciled tension between the ADA and the Unruh Act.

4 Plaintiff argues the Court should not dismiss his state law claims because, even if the Court
5 ultimately concludes it is bound by Gunther, he has alleged intent. However, even if Plaintiff
6 alleges Defendant intentionally maintained the subject property in its current non-compliant
7 condition and intentionally refrained from altering the subject property to meet accessibility
8 standards, [Complaint, ¶ 14-15], the Court would still ultimately be required to resolve a novel and 9 complex issue of state law – whether Plaintiff is required to show intentional discrimination in 10 order to recover damages under the Unruh Act. Therefore, the Court declines to exercise
11 supplemental jurisdiction over Plaintiff’s Unruh Act claims in this case. In addition, Plaintiffs 12 state law claims under the California Disabled Persons Act and the California Health and Safety 13 Code are intertwined with his Unruh Act claims. Therefore, the Court also finds it appropriate to 14 dismiss those claims to allow the state court to adjudicate all of Plaintiff’s state claims.

15 Conclusion

16 For the reasons set forth herein, the Court GRANTS Defendant’s motion to dismiss
17 Plaintiff’s state law claims [Doc. Nos 4 and 5]. Plaintiff’s state law claims only are dismissed
18 without prejudice to being re-filed in state court.
